Tips for Getting the Date You Want

Have two or three possible dates ready when you reach out, and consider Fridays or Sundays if your heart is not set on Saturday. Think about the season too. Spring and fall offer mild temperatures, while summer and winter can bring more availability and the barn's air conditioning or heating keeps guests comfortable either way.

Couples from Daleville, Cloverdale, Troutville and Roanoke also benefit from touring early. Seeing the barn, porch and pavilion in person makes the decision easier, and you can ask questions about setup, decorating access and capacity while there is still time to plan around the answers.

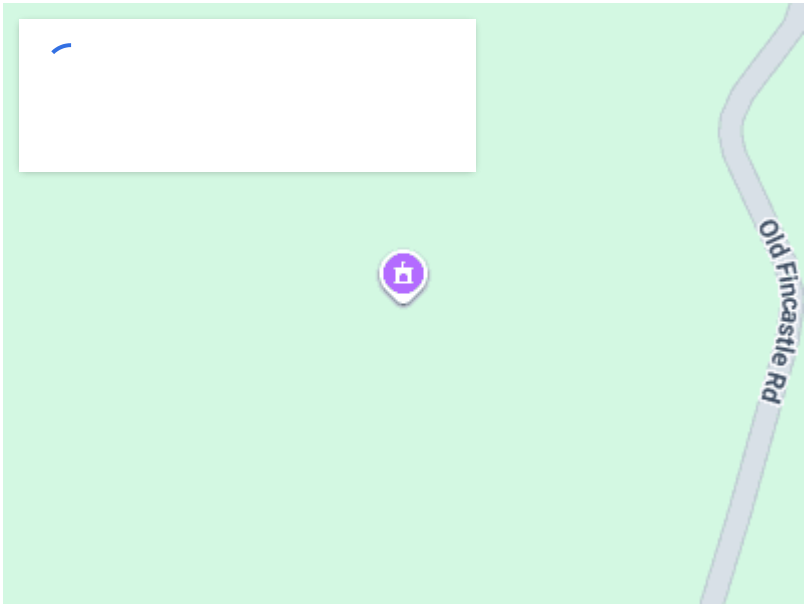

What to Have Ready Before You Inquire

Before you text or call a venue, settle on a rough guest count, a preferred season and a budget range. Know whether you want an outdoor ceremony, and have a sense of the style you are aiming for. These basics help the venue tell you quickly whether your plans fit the space. At Bailey Wick Farm, the family welcomes inquiries any day of the week, so you can reach out as soon as you have those answers in hand rather than waiting for business hours.
