If you were riding and a driver did not see you around Atlanta, the assumption is already working against you.

Adjusters and jurors bring an assumption to these cases: that the rider was going too fast, was lane splitting or weaving, or took a risk a car driver would not.

Sometimes that is accurate. Usually the car turned left across a rider who had the right of way.

The work is physical evidence, not story, since the story is doubted before it is told. Sight line analysis carry more weight than either version of events.

Severity helps and hurts. A rider has no structure around them, so the same impact produces far worse injuries. The defense response is often to argue the rider accepted that risk by riding at all.

Flanagan Law, P.C. is a personal injury trial firm in Atlanta, Georgia.

Georgia requires helmets, which takes an argument off the table when it applies. Gear that took the auto accident claim lawyer impact is evidence and should be preserved rather than discarded. So should the motorcycle itself, which is often sold for salvage before anyone photographs it Atlanta car accident lawyer properly.

How much does a personal injury lawyer cost in Atlanta?

Most personal injury lawyers in Georgia work on a contingency fee, which means the fee comes out of the recovery instead of out of pocket. There is no attorney fee if there is no recovery. Flanagan Law, P.C. handles Atlanta injury cases on a contingency fee and does not charge for the first conversation, so an injured person can find out where they stand before deciding anything.

How long do I have to file an injury claim in Georgia?

Georgia generally gives an injured person two years from the date of the injury to file a personal injury lawsuit, and a claim against a city, county or state agency can require written notice far sooner than that. Waiting also makes proof harder to collect, because records and camera footage do not last forever. Flanagan Law, P.C. reviews the deadlines that apply to a specific Atlanta case at no cost.

What should I do after a truck accident in Atlanta?

Get medical care, report the wreck, and avoid giving a recorded statement to the trucking company's insurer before you talk to a lawyer. Trucking companies often send their own investigators to the scene within hours, and evidence such as onboard data and camera footage can be overwritten or lost in days. Flanagan Law, P.C. moves early in truck cases to preserve that evidence.

Do I have to go to court for a personal injury case?

Most injury claims settle without a trial. The cases that settle well are usually the ones the other side believes will actually be tried. Flanagan Law, P.C. is a trial firm, and Brendan Flanagan has tried cases to verdict in Georgia courts, including a $99.9 million wrongful death verdict in Fulton County. Past results do not guarantee or predict a similar outcome in any future case.

Who can be held responsible in a commercial truck wreck?

Responsibility can reach past the driver to the trucking company, a maintenance contractor, a freight broker, or the company that loaded the trailer. Each one is a separate question with its own proof. Flanagan Law, P.C. investigates every party that may share responsibility in an Atlanta commercial vehicle case.

What is my injury case worth?

No honest lawyer can put a number on a case before reading the medical records and understanding how the injury changed a person's life and work. Value depends on the treatment, the lasting effects, who was at fault, and the coverage available. Flanagan Law, P.C. will walk through those pieces with an injured person in Atlanta before anyone signs anything.
